

Consultant Subject Teacher

Are you:

- A qualified teacher of English, History, Maths or Science? Practising and former teachers welcome
- Experienced teaching at secondary school level?
- Fluent in English?
- Educated to degree level or equivalent?
- Interested in International Education, curriculum and assessment?

...then we would like to hear from you.

Who we are and what we do:

Ecctis delivers a wide range of services, products and projects in the field of international education. We help make sense of international qualifications and support a range of clients including individuals, universities and colleges, awarding bodies and government ministries.

This includes undertaking a range of in-depth curriculum and/or assessment mapping projects across different education systems.

The role:

We are currently looking for qualified teachers to contribute to international expert panels on demand. This will involve:

- Reviewing extracts of curriculum documentation in your specialist subject area (English, History, Maths or the Sciences – Biology, Chemistry, Physics) from different education systems
- Reviewing and critiquing the proposed level of demand against a set of pre-established criteria, flagging any issues of clarity or uncertainty
- Attendance at a panel meeting (held on Microsoft Teams) to discuss with fellow subject experts.

For this particular role, consultant subject teachers will need to be able to attend a panel meeting on 30th / 31st May / 1st June and be able to undertake approximately 24 hours' preparation work between 16th - 29th May (flexible hours). All work can be conducted remotely.

To apply: Email a copy of your CV and a covering email to: consultant@ecctis.com, confirming your availability in May.

More widely, we are always looking for subject experts holding a degree and qualified teacher status in any country, especially those with teaching experience in two or more countries or towards different upper secondary qualifications. If you cannot attend the May panel but would like to be considered for similar roles in the future, please submit your CV, highlighting you are not available for May.

Ecctis Ltd is committed to fostering a culture of inclusivity and connectedness. The core of our work involves working internationally with individuals all over the globe with different backgrounds. In recruiting for our organisation, Ecctis Ltd is an Equal Opportunities Employer, and welcomes the unique contributions you can bring; therefore we specifically welcome applicants of all backgrounds, regardless of race (including colour, nationality, and ethnic or national origin), sex or gender, gender reassignment, sexual orientation, religion or belief, age, marriage or civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, or disability.
